Teaching

GRADUATE COURSES

Theories of Political Economy

How can long-dead Adam Smith help us explain trafficking of Thai women to Japan? What insights can Karl Marx provide to the Financial Crisis of 2008? What can Schumpeter teach us about cartels in the Mexican Telecom Industry?

Politics of Finance

How do political events affect the stock market? Why do some governments default on their debt, while others do not? What political factors explain the choice of exchange rate regimes?

Politics of Natural Resources

Does a resource curse exist? How do natural resources affect conflict? What is the interaction between resources, politics, and institutions?

Graduate Teaching Seminar

How to design a course syllabus? How to accurately assess learning? How to deal with cheating?

Philosophy of Social Science

Alternative facts. Fake news. Derogatory labels like these are meant to call into question the validity of one empirical evidence. This course provides an overview of philosophical questions concerning how we can know what we know (or don't know).

UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Political Economy of Developing Countries

We typically assume that Democracy is good for economic growth – but if this is the case, how do we explain the economic success of China? Similarly, economic theory tells us that governments should not interfere with the market – but why did South Korea industrialize at an incredible pace by doing exactly that, while Argentina failed miserably? Why are natural resources a blessing in Botswana but a curse in Nigeria?

Political Economy of Industrialized Countries

How can German carmakers be among the best in the world if they give 2 years notice before firing someone and grant 3 years of maternity leave? Why can the Swedish economy finance free universal health care? Why is it rational for German companies to grant their workers veto rights over management decisions?

Politics of International Finance

How do politicians cause and/or prevent banking crises? Why do some political events have major implications for the stock market? When do politicians instigate currency wars between countries? Why do governments default on their debt even though they have the money?

Quantitative Analysis in Political Science

Ever wonder whether a particular claim is true? Ever get into an intellectual debate and wanted to back up your argument with evidence? This course will teach you how to analyze data to evaluate claims and produce sound evidence.

Introduction to International Politics

Why are there wars? How does international politics shape trade and investment? Why is policy coordination among multiple governments so difficult, even though problems such as financial crises and international terrorism are global? This course offers an introduction to international politics.

Law, Politics, and Finance

Governments pass laws to regulate the domestic banking sector or supervise securities markets. In short, the process of negotiating and implementing legal rules is intimately connected to politics. This course offers the opportunity to learn how politics shapes the legal rules governing banks, stock markets, debt, trade, and investment.

Modern Societies I

What holds societies together? Who controls the actions of democratic states? Whose preferences are enacted? This course provides you with an opportunity to learn more about how public policies in other nations differ from our own while simultaneously challenging you to think about why they differ in the ways they do.

Modern Societies II

Why do policies on issues like social welfare, education, and immigration differ markedly from nation to nation? The course focuses on specific policies and why they differ across countries.

Introduction to Non-Academic Writing

If you want to change the world, you will need to learn how to communicate messages accurately, correctly, and persuasively. If you want to advance in your career, you will need to learn how to write effectively, clearly, and concisely. This course offers a hands-on introduction to various types of professional writing.
