and Domestic Law"

"Procedural Law in the Context of Community Law
and Domestic Law"

As community law barely deals with procedural questions, the ECJ has developed in its rulings procedural principles that have to be applied by Community Institutions. These principles also affect the proceedings before national authorities as far as the authorities are concerned with the execution of community law. This is due to the fact that the principle of procedural autonomy of the member states finds its limits where community law might be infringed.

with friendly support of

At this conference the differences between the domestic procedural principles and rules of the EC countries shall be identified and analyzed in the context of community law requirements. Those parts of community law that are already harmonized in that respect, e.g. customs law, will serve as a starting point for the discussion to what extent a harmonized procedural law is possible and required for a future Common Consolidated Corporate Tax Base, an EU Tax or for the proper enforcement of community law in general.

More information to that topic including the legal and economic questions which will be dealt within the course of the conference can be found on the following homepage:
